

CURREY & COMPANY

For Immediate Release April 21, 2012

Contact: Bethanne Matari 678 533 1474 bmatari@curreyco.com

Currey Industrial

Look around your city and you will see early 20th century factories, mills and industrial buildings that have been renovated and turned into living/retail spaces. Every city has them. We have finally learned that saving this architecture and its history is worth the effort and expense. Design trends that have evolved out of this process are an ever growing part of the home furnishings industry. Industrial-styled products mix well in many interiors and bring to the home environment a sense of “back-to-the-basics.”

Turbina Pendant

Verne Pendant

Metal plays a big role in the industrial style and the Currey & Company design team has embraced this concept with the Currey Industrial Collection. Wrought iron and hand-forged metal is where the company began more than 24 years ago. We have extensive experience in working with simple, honest materials – iron, reclaimed wood and glass as well as recycled textiles. The Turbina Pendant was inspired by a wind turbine. The Verne Pendant design style is reminiscent of the head gear worn by Captain Nemo on the Nautilus submarine in Jules Verne's 20,000 Leagues Under the Sea. Both pendants are hand finished in bona fide Hiroshi Gray.

Repurposing and authenticity are essential to the industrial chic trend. Old metal hinges, giant bolts and screws, rusty angle iron, weathered steel beams and unfinished turned-wood columns are all used to create the look.

Earthshine Pendant

Hogarth Chandelier

The Earthshine Pendant is constructed of randomly hammered metal with a Blackened Steel finish inside and out. The warm glow is provided by the incandescent light reflecting on the metallic finish. Turned wood with a rough surface is the center post of the Hogarth Chandelier. The ribbed wrought iron ring, arms and candle cups are hand finished with Mole Black. This stripped-down beauty with 8 lights will add a lot of illumination to any room.

Digital images of Currey & Company products are available upon request.

Contact: Bethanne Matari 678 533 1474 bmadari@curreyco.com
Visit our website: www.curreyandcompany.com
TWITTER - @CurreyCo
FACEBOOK – facebook.com/CurreyCo